Training on end of life care for domiciliary care staff

This training pack aims to improve end of life care by domiciliary care staff.

Before you begin

Thank you for requesting this end of life care training pack.

In the pack you will find:

Real stories: Real insight

- PowerPoint
- short film
- competences
- help for others to replicate
- list of published materials.

Short film

The short film used in the pack was originally developed as part of a National End of Life Care Programme (NEOLCP) project to look at whether community based care staff could be the 'key worker' in someone's end of life care package. As a result it became evident how many key competences community care staff were able to demonstrate throughout their daily tasks of supporting people to live in their own home.

We envisage that you use this resource as part of your usual end of life care training and development or as part of a focused team discussion.

We recommend that before you begin to prepare to deliver a session you:

Watch the video clip without reading any background information

Look at the PowerPoint presentation and familiarise yourself with the noted pages

Read the supporting reports included in the pack.

You will see from the format and the nature of the film that it could also be used as a recruitment tool as well as a training resource.
